
ASHBURTON BOROUGH SCHOOL

CENTENNIAL

18TH, 19TH, 20TH, 21ST FEBRUARY, 1972

FOREWORD

The Ashburton Borough School, now celebrating its centenary, is the first Ashburton school to reach its century. In fact, all three of the older town primary schools (Allenton, Hampstead, Tinwald) began as adjuncts of the Borough School.

The School, which opened with a roll of four on February 19, 1872, even anteceded the Ashburton Borough Council by six years.

Celebrating a century of history is a reason for justifiable pride in former pupils, administrators and teachers. A cause for pride, because the school made such a contribution to the young town in the early days — as it continues to do to-day, on the eve of its second century.

A school deals in intangibles ; its success or failure is not so much in school buildings or facilities provided, although a reasonable standard must be reached, but in school spirit and in the pupils it sends on to higher education.

By this standard, the Borough School has been a success. It has been fortunate in the calibre of its administrators and teachers who have fought over the years for the welfare of the school.

The large number of former pupils and teachers who have enrolled for the centennial functions, attests to the regard for, and appreciation of, what the school has achieved. It is also proof of school spirit, which flourishes as strongly as ever, as the second hundred years is entered.

THE ORIGINAL SCHOOL

A Message from the Hon. George F. Gair

It is an honour for me to accept the invitation of your Committee to write a few words of introduction for your Centennial booklet.

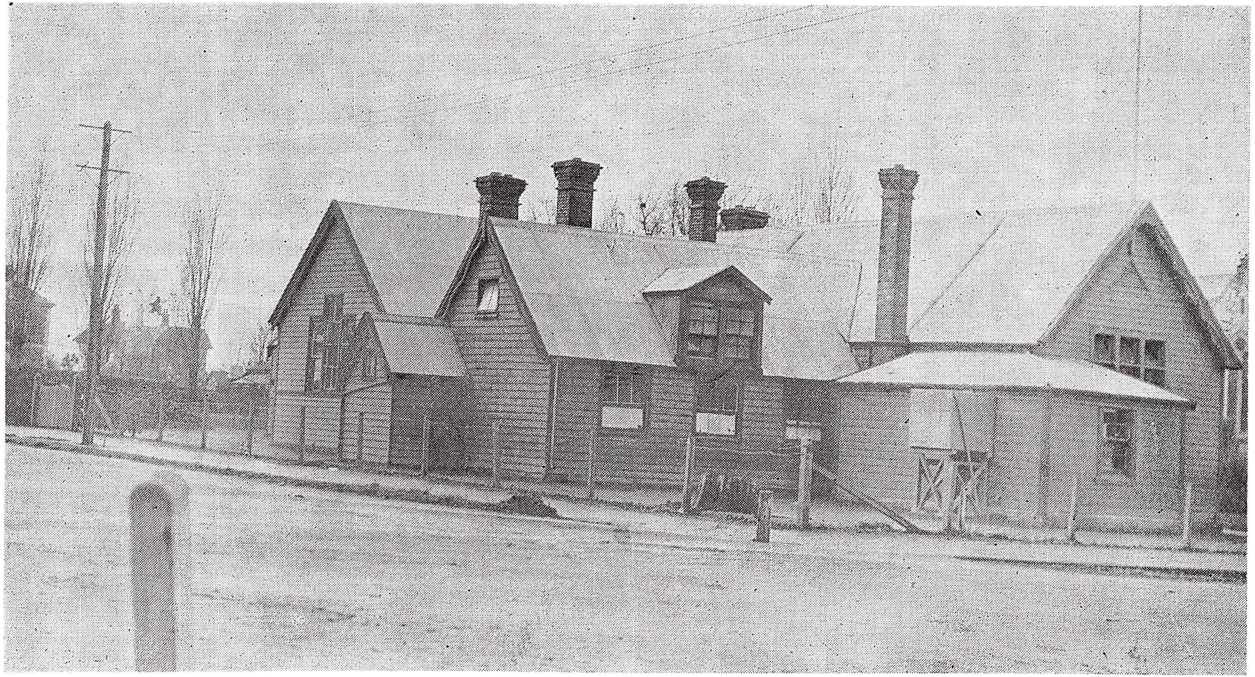
I would like to begin by congratulating you on achieving 100 years of service through education to your community. Your school is numbered among those New Zealand schools that are older even than our national system of education, and as such offers a worthy example of the value placed on education by the pioneers of your district over 100 years ago. This determination to have their children educated directly influenced the growth of our education system. In places like Ashburton, where the desire to help the school has always been strong, the devotion of parents has also had a great effect on the amenities your children have enjoyed. Your fine swimming pool, created where there was once a gravel pit, is a good example of community assistance to the school.

From somewhat small and insignificant beginnings, Ashburton Borough School has become a vital part of your community and an integral part of the national system. When first opened in 1872, it was a single roomed school with one teacher, while now in 1972 it has 11 classrooms and can cater for over 500 pupils.

One of the most obvious changes that has occured in education over the last 100 years is in the curriculum. Many of the men and women atending this Centennial were educated in the days when the standard pass system dominated education, when as a result, the curriculum was narrow and rigid. To-day, progress through the school is no longer determined by one examination, and a more liberal and progressive approach can be used in the curriculum.

Although there have been many such changes in all aspects of New Zealand life since the days of the early settlers, their spirit still lives on in their descendants to-day. This is reflected in the way that you as pupils, ex-pupils, parents and teachers contribute to and participate in the school's activities and in its growth and development. Without this combined effort the school would no longer be an integral part of the community.

May your second 100 years be as successful as your first.



THE OLD SCHOOL, CONTAINING SIX CLASSROOMS

One Hundred Years

Few records exist of the early years of the Ashburton Borough School which opened on February 19, 1872, in a 30ft by 18ft building at the corner of Tancred Street, Short Street and Park Street, on the site now occupied by the St. Stephen's Anglican Church Hall.

Although direct records are not available, enough is known from secondary sources to give an accurate history of events leading to the establishment of the school, and its early and later years. The first mention refers to January 7, 1868, when a meeting was held to consider the establishment of a school.

Most of the twelve men listed as attending the meeting are still remembered in Ashburton through the everyday use of their names given to town steets. Those present were: John Grigg, G. H. Greenstreet, Robert Park, W. L. Peter, W. Turton, A. Dobson, F. P. H. W. Dunford Jnr, J. Nixon, L. S. Williams, J. J. Croft and A. Thompson.

It was Park, the surveyor who laid out Ashburton streets, who moved that a committee be formed to investigate a school and that application be made to the Government for a school site. A second resolution by Peters, seconded by Frank Pitt, appointed the following committee to carry the proposal further: Grigg, Greenstreet, J. Chalmers, Turton, B. Ede, J. Brown, J. Hunt, Bland, Dunford. On the motion of Turton, seconded by Dobson, a subscription list was circulated to help finance the school and master's house.

The original minutes of the meeting and the subscription list, or possibly a hand written copy, is held by the Ashburton Historical Society. Those contributing were: Grigg £20, W. Turton £3, Thomas and John Turton £5.5.0, Greenstreet £5, Dobson £2.2.0, Park £5, Pitt £5, Dunford £5, Nixon £5, Williams £3, Peter £10, Hunt £5, J. Jamieson £5, J. Harrison £2.2.0, Thompson £2.2.0.

It was not for four years that the efforts of the committee were successful in persuading the Government to open a school at Ashburton. In the intervening period, one and possibly two, schools were opened in the town. Alex Hewson in his reminiscences of the early days of settlement, published in 1918, has a 19 word reference:

> "The first school was a lean-to, near where the police barracks now stand, the first schoolmaster being Mr May."

The police barracks referred to were near Turton's original accommodation house, which is marked by an Historic Places Trust plaque on East Street, near the traffic bridge.

PRIVATE SCHOOL

In his history of Ashburton, Dr W. H. Scotter records that Gilbert Mayo, who left the Papanui School on June 30, 1870, opened a private boarding school in a house built for the purpose at Hampstead.

"His venture failed, however, because the local people decided about the same time to ask for a Government school supported by rates."

Mayo returned to Papanui in February 1872, the month the Borough School opened, and his house was bought by Dr James Ebeneezer Trevor, after whom the district was called Trevorton. This suburb is now named Hampstead.

The "Canterbury Times" of August 19, 1871, records that the inhabitants of the district petitioned for a school to the Board of Education. With the granting of the petition, rating for the school was set at a householder fee of £1, with parents of children attending paying 5s for each child to a maximum payment of £1 in fees.

Joseph Ward, who was the first headmaster, played an important part in the early life of the young town. Ward came to the Borough School from Lyttelton, where he had been teaching at the Church of England school for the previous eight years.

INVESTIGATION

The investigating committee's work had apparently been well done because a contemporary report praised the school and the master's house. In this, a visitor to Ashburton in 1872 said the school-master's house and the school "proved the best school property seen in Canterbury".

This tribute, coming only 14 years after the first settler, William Turton, reached Ashburton, indicates that the worth of education was well recognised by the founders of the school.

When the Borough School opened, Ashburton could not accurately be described as a town. It was not for another six years, in 1878, that Ashburton was constituted a Borough.

In the year the Borough School came into existence, there were few houses and few formed streets. Even two years after the school was opened, there were only two small houses to the south of Cass Street. East Street, a part of Moore Street and Alford Forest Road were the only formed steets. The remainder of the town and the countryside was tussock covered.

FOUR PUPILS

The school opened on February 19, 1872, with four pupils, and in the June quarter the average attendance was 20.

The seventy-fifth anniversary publication of the school listed J. Jamieson, Mary Jamieson, Jack Hunt, Mary Miller, Jack Bland, Tom Johnson, Jane Chalmers and Elizabeth Hunt among the early pupils.

The first newspaper account of the school roll was in October 16, 1873 issue of the "Lyttelton Times", which put the roll at 42, with the average attendance of 26.6. By the end of the following year, the roll had more than doubled to 91, made up of 54 boys and 37 girls. Five days later the "Times" reported that the roll increase justified the employment of a pupil-teacher and doubling school accommodation by building a second 30 feet by 18 feet extension. Justified or otherwise, the school had to wait until January 20, 1875 before tenders for an additional classroom were advertised.

The Provincial Gazette of 1874 listed one male and one female teacher, and an attendance of 33 boys and 31 girls. By 1875, the roll was up to 163, including 84 boys and a teaching staff of two men and one woman. The 1876 Gazette reported a roll of 260, with average atendance at 107.

A quickening of development of the town after the railway link in 1874 was soon reflected in the school roll, and with it came a need for more teachers. The roll rose to 300 in 1877 and 412 the following year, and to 476, including 200 infants, in 1879. To cope with the increase, two more rooms were built in 1877 and a further two in 1879, to give the school six rooms, totalling 3690 square feet.

FIRST HEADMASTER

The first headmaster, Ward, held the appointment for two years.

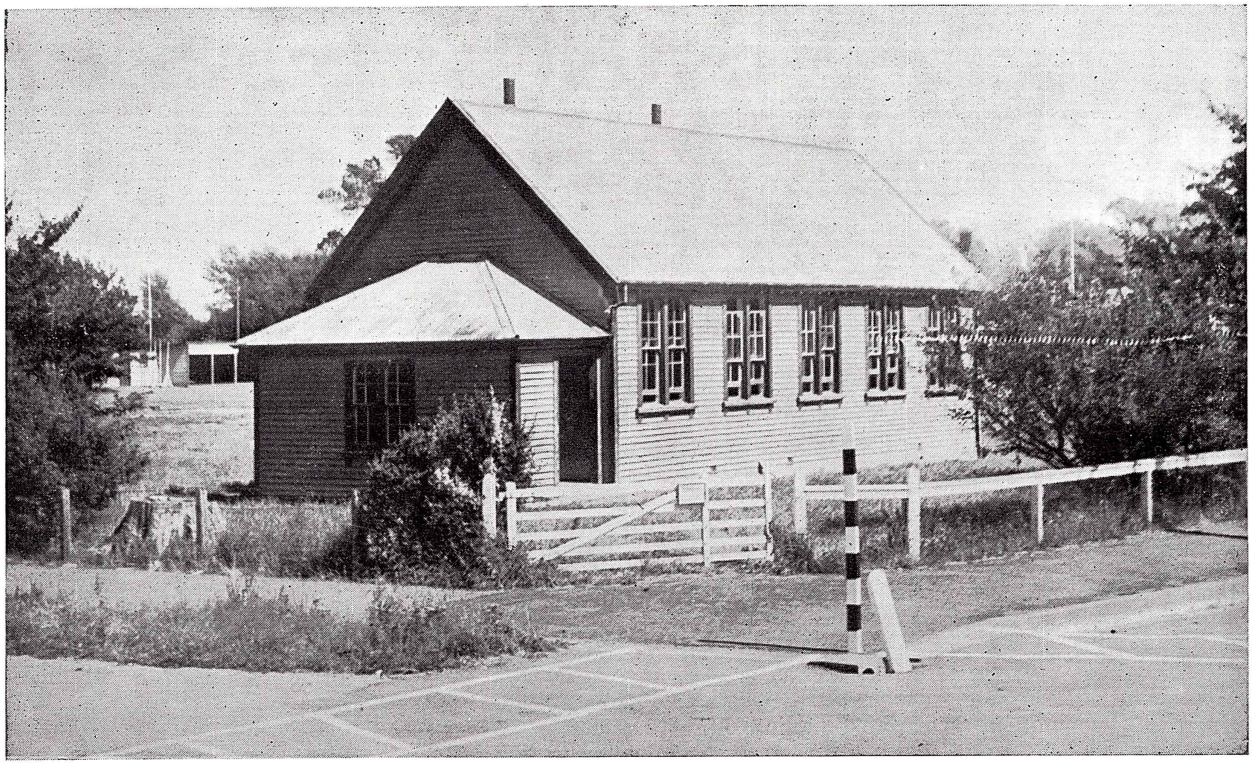
Dr Scotter praises his work for the young town, especially Ward's efforts in having a library established and for acting as unpaid librarian.

"He was the first district schoolmaster, and although not a success in his profession, he deserves recognition for what he did for early Ashburton, especially as librarian and as lay reader for Anglican services held in his schoolroom" says a reference in Dr Scotter's History.

Where in 1872 a visitor glowingly described the school building and master's house as the best in Canterbury, the position had greatly changed by the turn of the century.

In 1880 an infants' classroom was built diagonally opposite the original school on the site which was to become a source of controversy for more than a decade.

The school roll continued to rise, reaching 423 in 1886 and 488 in 1894, but dropped to 403 in 1899. A side-school at Allenton was established in 1877, and became a separate school in 1897, and independent status as Allenton School was reflected in the small roll two years later at Borough School. A side-school was opened at Hampstead in 1884 and became a main school in 1886.



THE OLD INFANT CLASSROOM

BUILDINGS SOUGHT

In the early 1900s, agitation began for new school buildings on a new site. The old school was generally criticised as being inadequate and this view was soon supported by criticism of the buildings as a health hazard. This led to a long struggle before a new brick school was opened in 1919.

Dr Scotter relates in some detail the efforts of the committee to secure new buildings.

"The school had grown up around two original rooms alongside St. Stephen's Church, but expansion had not kept pace with increases in numbers and the accommodation was quite inadequate for a roll of over 300 pupils. Moreover, rooms were small, badly lit and over-crowded.

"The playground across the road which contained an infant school, was low-lying and damp. The committee started to plan for new buildings in 1906 when a sanitary inspector condemned one of the rooms. They hoped then to obtain a Borough Reserve near the hospital as a good site. But ten years passed; the buildings were now 'old, unsightly and in many places rotting'. Yet the Canterbury Education Board met pleas for action with unsatisfactory assurances that many schools in Canterbury were in much worse condition.

"The committee resigned and parents held meetings of protests, but all in vain."

OPINION STIRRED

Siting of the school stirred local opinion, which was divided on retention of the infants' school area or development near the hospital. A report in the " Guardian" of August 21, 1906, contended that "it was high time something was done because the school was exceedingly small and stuffy". The existing site was described as unsatisfactory because of population distribution, with residential areas extending to the north and those to the east having the added hazard of children crossing the railway lines.

A committee member, The Rev. W. L. Salter, considered the grounds low and damp and not large enough, as well as being a health hazard compared with the five acres available in Wills Street. If a new school building was not approved, he favoured shifting the existing building to the Wills Street site. Although a subcommittee was set up to investigate this, its efforts were not successful. Mr. Salter quoted Town Sections 1003 - 1018 as the proposed 5 acre site. The area, however, is opposite the Nurses' Home in Elizabeth Street, bounded by Walker Street, Philip Street and Grigg Street. Moreover, it is of four acres.

The "Guardian" opposed Mr Salter's suggestion of moving the old school to a new site. "The only thing that will suit requirements is a new school on a new site, preferably in the vicinity of the Domain."

Five days later, the "Guardian" again commented editorially, strongly criticising school buildings, terming the school a relic of 30 or 40 years previous and advocating a more central site. It added that even when the proposed railway line subway near the Post Office was formed, there would still exist a danger to children from railway hazards.

Efforts to secure a new school were continued unsuccessfully for more than ten years.

RENEWED EFFORTS

Renewed efforts were made ten years later, aided by a severe epidemic in 1916 during which a local doctor condemned conditions at the school as a hazard.

Early the previous year, the "Guardian" returned to the attack on siting commenting on moves to provide a new school. In a leader of February 11, 1915, it said:

"A more unsuitable site it is hardly possible to imagine, except that it is central. An essential of a school playground and of a building used for a school is that they shall be dry in all seasons, but that essential is lacking in the case of the area surrounding the infant school which, after a few hours' rain, is dotted with miniature lakes, and in winter is generally unsuitable for any purpose except that of a duck pond."

While conceding that the school committee was faced with difficulties on siting, the leader went on to say that the pioneers, while recognising the school as the most important institution in the County, had unaccountably picked a poor site.

The newspaper regarded any proposed site as being "infinitely better" for the health and comfort of pupils and teachers than the existing one, although the "Guardian" was at best lukewarm to the proposed Borough reserve site flanked by West Belt, Wills Street and Cameron Street.

Controversy on siting became of secondary importance to securing new school buildings, which the Education Board refused to approve.

DEPUTATION

On June 8, 1917, a deputation made up of Mr W. G. Hillier, the Rev. G. Miller and Mesdames W. K. Watson and Begg waited on the Canterbury Education Board seeking approval for building a new eight-roomed school, with provision for infants' classrooms in the main school. The deputation stressed the danger to health of children in the existing school. Several months earlier a petition seeking a new school was widely circulated and supported and sent to the Government.

The Board held firm to its decision not to approve the building programme, and the impasse was resolved only by a generous gesture by Hugo Friedlander who offered to pay £1,000 which would finance about 20 per cent of the estimated cost of the new school. The Board, which had not planned a new building for the school for seven more years, agreed to bring forward its building programme and two years later, on March 18, 1919, the new block of six classrooms, totalling 4400 square feet, was officially opened by Mrs Friedlander.

The building, which still provides the bulk of the classroom accommodation, also ended the controversy over siting. It was built on the old playground site, which had been severely criticised for ten years as being unsuitable for school purposes.

The brick building containing six classrooms, cost £5,500 and was designed so that additional rooms could be added.

NEW INFANTS' SCHOOL

A new infants' school was built in 1938 close to River Terrace to the west of the main school, replacing the 1880 primers' school.

Not long after the primers' school was built a dental clinic was built with facilities for two dental nurses. These buildings continue to serve the school.

Emphasis on water safety and recreation led to a decision in March 1922 to construct a swimming pool at the school. The pool, built at a cost of £868, was opened in March, 1924. Dressing room accommodation, costing £280, was provided in March, 1924. Later improvements included installation by the Ashburton Amateur Swimming Club of tiered seating. The need for early swimming tuition resulted in the building of a learners' pool, measuring 30 feet by 15 feet, about 1946.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS

The infants' block, built in 1879-80, served many generations of pupils and was augmented by a small wooden building, later called "the model" in 1926.

In 1938 the infants' block was condemned for classroom use but, as was the experience with other buildings in the past, was to continue to serve the school for yet another term. The existing infants school, to the west of the main school, was erected in 1938, and later extended as the roll increased.

The next building provided was the dental clinic, built soon after the infants' two-classroom block was built in 1938. This has facilities for two dental nursse and serves the school and several other local schools.

In early 1956, a speech clinic, which also caters for other local schools, was established and a separate building was provided in mid-1957. As with the dental clinic, the central siting was the reason for establishing it at Borough School.

The opening of the administration block on September 9, 1963, led to a suggestion by the Canterbury Education Board that the infants' two-classroom block, said by the board to have been built in 1879, be de-

A letter from the board pointed out that no further money would be spent on upkeep of the block, which had been condemned in 1938. The letter went on to suggest that the building be demolished and the land brought into use as an additional playing area.

The committee agreed, and the final link with school buildings erected in the first two decades of the school, was broken.

A new library building, sited near the swimming pool, was erected about this time.

AWARDS

Outstanding work by pupils is recognised by a number of awards. Dux awards go to boy and girl pupils gaining highest aggregate marks in all subjects.

Smith scholarships, valued at $20 a year for two years, are awarded to Form II boys or girls judged on class and personal qualities and interest taken in school activities. Originally, the award, a bequest of $2000 from Herbert Smith in 1929, went to boys only, but in 1956, conditions were changed and girls became eligible for the two annual scholarships.

The best all-round boy and girl in Form II rceeive Steel Cups. These commemorate Lance-Sergeant H. W. Steel, and the awards were made possible by a gift from the brothers of Sergeant Steel, who was killed in World War I. Awards are made on academic, sporting and personal character of pupils and on outside school activities.

Citizenship Shields are awarded annually to the Form II boy and girl judged to have contributed most in school and other activities. The awards were given by Mr J. Davidson, a former chairman of the Ashburton County Council and Mayor of Ashburton (boys) and Mrs E. G. Moon (girls).

Other awards include the Robert Bell essay prize and Todd Cups (vocal solos).

SCHOOL ROLL

Changing patterns of community living have affected the school roll throughout the past 100 years. The Borough School, as the first Government school in the town in 1872, experienced rapid increases in roll as the rail link with Christchurch was connected in in the early 1870s, leading to quick growth in population as settlers moved south. The school roll rose to more than 400 in the first six years, but fell as 'side schools' were established at Allenton, Hampstead and Tinwald.

In the following decades the roll growth followed a more steady line, but was again affected in the 1930s as residential areas developed farther away from the centre of the town and school entrants enrolled in schools close to pupils' homes. In the late 1930s, Education Department policy brought a rise in school roll as one-teacher schools at Greenstreet (1937) and Pendarves (1938) were closed and pupils were brought to Borough School by bus.

The post-World War II housing boom intensified residential development in the suburbs and the school roll remained static. A changed policy by the Christchurch Roman Catholic Education Board in 1965 led to a decision not to accept enrolment of primer classes at St Joseph's School and many pupils, who would ordinarily have gone to St Joseph's, enrolled at Borough School for primer education. This policy has been changed for the 1972 year and primer one enrolments will again be accepted at St Joseph's. This move will have an effect on Borough School roll during centennial year.

However, there are grounds to believe that the roll will become stabilised in the next few years. Compensating for the loss of Roman Catholic enrolments is more intensive housing development in the inner town area and this will be reflected in school enrolments in coming years.

The first-day roll in centennial year was 280, a decline of 50 on 1971.

Recollections

Recollections of the early days of the school, by Miss A. Henderson, of Sumner, give a fascinating glimpse of pioneering life in Ashburton, almost 100 years ago.

Her account, published in the seventy-fifth anniversary booklet of the school is:

Almost seventy-two years have gone by since we first went to live in Ashburton, and it would be something of a task to recollect all that happened between that date and the time I left it for good. Some things, however, still live and possibly there may not be many to record them. Ashburton was then the terminus of the railway, and the bridge was in process of being built and the workers' camp was on the far side. Coaches ran to Timaru and to Mount Somers. The housing problem was worse then than it is now, there was not a place of any description to be had for rent — a great predicament for us, for there were eight children in our family. Still things are never so bad as they might be, and just in the nick of time a four-roomed cottage owned by the coach proprietors fell vacant and we got the loan of it for six months, the stipulation being that we either build a house for ourselves or get someone who owned a section to build one for us. Dr. Trevor had recently cut up part of his estate and a farmer, Mr P. Mahar, of Wakanui, had bought a corner section just past the Presbyterian Manse glebe, and he very kindly undertook to put up a five-roomed house for us within the time. Timber was scarce and difficult to obtain, so he was not able to do more than build the shell of the house; but into it we went and at once set to work to make a vegetable garden. I am sure that to the work we put in on that newly broken soil, combined with the health-giving air of Ashburton district, our family owes its longevity. Within a year the Government cut up a block of land west of the railway and put it up to auction. We secured a section and put up a house for ourselves.

People were pouring into Ashburton and building was in progress everywhere. The school to which five of us went, had then a master, an infant mistress and one pupil teacher—Mr Joseph Ward, Miss Jessie Stewart and Egbert Mayo. I well remember the day we joined the school seeing a young man with a thick beard sitting in the back row of the highest class. He rode in from Ashburton Forks, and a nice gentlemanly fellow he was. There were several others in their late 'teens, and later on, after my sister and I joined the staff as pupil teachers and the bridge was completed, we had a black-bearded man well on in his twenties, who rode in from Lagmhor Station.

When we arrived about April, 1876, men were at work laying the foundations of the Post and Telegraph Office right opposite the Railway Station on East Street and in an amazingly short time a fine row of shops was built on the north side of it, in one of which "The Ashburton Guardian" made its home.

The first event of any importance which I can think of was the opening of the railway bridge on the completion of the line through to Timaru. It was a great day and after the official opening the school children were given free rides across the bridge and back in the train.

I was only a pupil teacher for a few months and as a teacher was almost always employed teaching Standard III, which changed its personnel every year.

I must have worked under Mr Ward till the end of my third year, when he retired and Mr Alexander Scott was appointed in his place. When we completed our pupil teachers' course my sister went to the Teachers' Training School in Christchurch and I stayed on to take my assistant's training under Mr Stott, and on passing the examination in 1880 took an appointment as infant mistress at Southbridge and left Ashburton, although I was too young to hold a certificate I was only back during harvest holidays in 1882 for our family went back to Christchurch for good.

Other recollections are:—
